PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

We live in the most interesting of times for First Nations Property Taxation. There are changes happening constantly.

It is important to use the education opportunities and legislative tools that are available to us to rise to this challenge and continue to build our property tax regimes.

It is the passion of the FNTAA to continue to deliver our message at every opportunity. The focus that we want to instil is to remember that property tax is only one of the planks that make up the key stones of our communities.

Lands Management, Economic Development and Property Taxation each contribute to community development. We all need to learn as much as we can about each discipline in order to maximize our contribution to community development.

Tulo Centre of Indigenous Economics

The Tulo Centre of Indigenous Economics continues to work on delivering both online and executive classes of the Certificate in First Nation Tax Administration and the Certificate in First Nation Applied Economics.

Tulo has recently offered classes in both certificate programs with more classes to be scheduled. Check the Tulo website for current class scheduling information and registration applications.

Tulo will also be offering a series of tutorials on Submitting Rates and Expenditure Laws and By-Laws. This brief tutorial will provide an outline of the process and review of rates and expenditure laws or by-laws. Please watch for invitations to register or visit the website for more information.

National Chief Shawn Atleo speaking to Tulo class, February 2010

The Tax Administration Software (TAS) is a tool to assist Tax Administrators through the complete annual property tax cycle: assessments, rate approval, tax notices, collection and enforcement.

This new software addresses the administrative rules and requirements resulting from s.83 of the Indian Act, the First Nations Fiscal and Statistical Management Act and First Nation Tax Commission Standards.

This is what current TAS users are saying:

“I found the software extremely easy to learn. We entered our tax payments at record speed this year. TAS has already become a critical tool which I keep on my desktop all day long...”

Please visit the Tulo website or contact Tulo for more information on TAS and how to install the program.
